St. Louis District

These are both the best of times and the worst of times for private clubs, a spokesman for the National Club Association told an audience of St. Louis area club managers, officers and directors in October at Norwood Hills C.C. (Joe Botkin, host).

Aubrey King, NCA director of public affairs and guest speaker at the monthly chapter meeting, noted that the best of times are reflected in the country's current prosperity and demographics.

"People in this country are becoming more interested in fine dining," he said. "Also, the baby boomers are reaching early middle age. They are looking for the services and functions clubs are going to give them.

The worst of times can be seen in the continued government pressures against clubs, which are perceived as "bastions of privilege" and "refuges of the affluent," King said. Also, growth in the club industry has been stagnant the past two decades. With a few exceptions, the only new facilities have been development and for-profit clubs, he said.

Paradise of the Pacific

The October meeting was conducted at the Elks Club on the world-famous shores of Waikiki Beach at the foot of Diamond Head (T. J. Stockinger, host). In addition to club managers in attendance, the University of Hawaii Student Chapter also was well represented.

After the business meeting, the social program was begun with alohas and farewells to Richard Maynes, a past president of CMAA, who is relocating to the Monterey Peninsula Club on the mainland. He had been general manager of Oahu C.C.

Detroit

The chapter held its annual club managers and directors golf outing in August at the Oakland Hills C.C., Birmingham, Mich. The south course provided the ultimate challenge, and host manager Raymond P. White had the staff attend to every detail in an exquisite day of golf and dining.

The evening's presentation included a viewing of the film, "the Role of a General Manager."

Later the same month, a group of 28 managers and spouses boarded a train for a weekend trip to Toronto and London, Ontario. The trip was hosted by John Frantz, general manager, London Hunt and C.C., and included golf, sightseeing, shopping and fine dining.
